Candidate for Mayor has asked people throughout the community for their thoughts, and come up with a plan.

GREEN BAY - Mayoral candidate and former State Representative Eric Genrich has gathered input from all corners of the city for months, and has taken the information gained to create a community platform that will serve as a blueprint for building a modern, progressive Green Bay.

The platform, entitled For All Green Bay: A Shared Vision for Our Community is available here.

The report is "focused on building a vibrant, inclusive economy, governing a city that works for all residents, and creating a welcoming and thriving community," says Genrich. "This platform is not exhaustive of all the ideas and policies that I embrace, but it should give city residents and community leaders a sense of what my priorities will be."

Genrich thinks the process will serve as a blueprint for building a 21st century Green Bay that is responsive, strong, and welcoming. He encourages everyone to take a look, and wants you to let him know what you think.

With it, he says "we can achieve this hopeful vision for our community that makes space for all people to thrive."
