urgent attention and action, and these funds will continue our efforts to help folks who are struggling regain their hope, dignity, and health, providing them with the safe, stable housing they need to recover.”

“We are pleased the Recovery Voucher Program offers safe and stable housing, a basic need often taken for granted, to people in treatment and recovery of an opioid use disorder,” said DHS Secretary Kirsten Johnson. “We are grateful for Gov. Evers’ support and for our recovery residence partners who are providing the safe housing and care management necessary for healing.”

“We’re once again proud to partner with DHS and local agencies to ensure that basic housing needs are met for people across the state through the Recovery Voucher program,” said DOA Secretary Kathy Blumenfeld. “Safe housing and shelter are critical for recovery, as they are for every Wisconsinite.”

DOA’s Division of Energy, Housing and Community Resources (DEHCR) is administering the program, leveraging supportive housing expertise and strong existing partnerships with the Continuum of Care (CoC) Program in Milwaukee, Dane, and Racine counties, as well as local homeless coalitions serving the other 69 counties across the state. The seven agencies funded to administer the program have a primary focus area covering 30 counties; however, all people within the state can access the program through any of the agencies.
