Wisconsinites who missed the original enrollment deadline or their first payment for their enrolled plan now have another opportunity to sign up beginning February 15, 2021.

MADISON — Gov. Tony Evers with Wisconsin Insurance Commissioner Mark Afable announced Monday that HealthCare.gov will be re-opening for Americans to enroll in health insurance coverage beginning February 15, 2021 through May 15, 2021, following an announcement from the Biden Administration last week.

Wisconsinites who missed either the original enrollment deadline or their first payment for their enrolled plan, now have another opportunity to sign up. People who are already enrolled also have another chance to review their plan to make sure it still meets their coverage needs.

“Ensuring that every Wisconsinite has affordable, accessible healthcare coverage is critical not only now as we continue to battle the COVID-19 pandemic but as we move forward to recover from the pandemic and get Wisconsinites back to work,” said Gov. Evers. “I am appreciative to President Biden and the many advocates for making it possible for more Wisconsinites to get covered this year.”

This announcement comes after advocates pushed for greater access to healthcare coverage in the face of the COVID-19 pandemic. In December, Commissioner Afile joined commissioners across the country in sending a letter to then President-elect Biden requesting a new enrollment period.

“This is great news for folks in Wisconsin,” said Commissioner Afile. “If you missed your opportunity to enroll last fall, you now have another chance to get affordable health insurance for you or your family. You may also still qualify for tax credits that could keep your monthly premiums low.

“Since we are only two weeks away, now is the time to help us spread the word and make sure everyone knows they can enroll in quality health coverage starting February 15th,” finished Commissioner Afile.
