Democrats seek bipartisan vote to limit military authority, hope to find Republican lawmakers leery of president's foreign policy decisions.

WASHINGTON, D.C. - Democrats will attempt to curb President Trump's war powers after a U.S. drone strike killed a senior Iranian military leader in what lawmakers are calling a major escalation that could lead to war.

Senate Democrats are mobilizing behind a resolution that would force Trump to withdraw American troops from hostilities against Iran unless Congress declares war or passes a resolution authorizing military force.
