Travel band has holes, critics like New York Gov. Andrew Cuomo saw lack of test kits for coronavirus as contributing factors to the virus's spread.

WASHINGTON, DC - The Trump administration's response to the coronavirus outbreak in the U.S. is threatening to undermine public confidence in the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

The CDC has been at the center of the U.S. response to the outbreak, with CDC Director Robert Redfield becoming a regular presence at administration briefings with Vice President Pence and President Trump.

But the CDC has also come under criticism, along with other parts of the government, for a slow rollout of tests for the coronavirus that has helped contribute to the rapid spread of the virus around the United States.
