MADISON - As we face a crucial election in April for the Wisconsin Supreme Court, I took a look back at the role that outside money – and especially from Wisconsin Manufacturers & Commerce – played in turning these technically nonpartisan races into highly partisan ones now:

How Wisconsin Supreme Court Races Became So Partisan

I also went over the latest Marquette Law School poll and unearthed an interesting fact: A clear majority of Republicans favor a lot of progressive issues, as I point out here:

Progressive Issues Are Popular Issues

I hope you like these two items, and I hope you enjoy the upcoming holidays.
