Warns “Beware of Bipartisanship”

Madison, Wis. - During a Fox News interview Ron Johnson once again came out against bipartisan infrastructure efforts that would positively impact communities across Wisconsin. However, Johnson didn't stop at criticizing the bipartisan infrastructure efforts; he came out swinging against the very idea of working in a bipartisan manner saying, "I always warn people [to] beware of bipartisanship."

"Wisconsiners are fed up with the self-serving, partisan games Ron Johnson continues to play at their expense. The fact that communities across Wisconsin will benefit from the bipartisan infrastructure bill makes absolutely no difference to Johnson," Democratic Party of Wisconsin Senate Communications Advisor Philip Shulman said. "The only person Johnson serves in Washington is himself."

The bipartisan infrastructure package will help rebuild roads and bridges, expand broadband, particularly in rural areas, and invest in utility infrastructure like water pipes.
