Gov. Tony Evers' support of bipartisan income tax cuts helps families facing rising costs.

MADISON, Wis. — Today is Tax Day, and this year, Wisconsinites are keeping more of their money thanks to Governor Tony Evers. During his first term, 86% of Wisconsin taxpayers are seeing an income tax cut of 15% or more

. Overall,
2.4 million Wisconsin tax filers will see relief

Last year, Gov. Evers signed the first bipartisan budget in more than a decade. In addition to the $3.4 billion income tax cut for Wisconsinites, Gov. Evers also passed the largest increase in general aid for education and the first increase in special education funding in more than a decade. Wisconsin small businesses are also keeping more of their hard-earned money because of a half a billion dollars in small business tax cuts that Gov. Evers signed into law last year.

Leaders from across the political spectrum gave Gov. Evers credit for signing the bipartisan state budget. Conservative talk show host Jeff Wagner of 620 radio said: “I give Evers credit for signing this. [...] He signed one of the largest tax decreases - tax cuts - in state history. He deserves credit for signing it. [...] So credit to go around.”
