WASHINGTON - Normal people say “Happy Holidays” or “Merry Christmas” — but Donald Trump used the Christmas holiday to wish his political enemies “rot in hell” and then, again, call for the terminati
on of the Affordable Care Act
, jeopardizing the health insurance of 40 million Americans.

The stocking stuffers? Not just repealing the Affordable Care Act, but doing everything he can to raise health care costs for the American people.

Higher prescription drug costs.

No protections for Americans with preexisting conditions.

Young Americans kicked off insurance plans.

Elimination of Medicaid expansion.

Statement from Biden-Harris 2024 spokesperson Seth Schuster:

“It’s Christmas 2023 and Donald Trump is still promising to do everything he can to take away Americans’ health care. If Donald Trump has his way, 40 million Americans would have their health care coverage endangered, protections for 100 million Americans with preexisting conditions would be at risk, and more than 2 million young people would be kicked off their parents’ plans. His erratic Christmas Day rant is just another flashing-red danger sign of what’s to come if he returns to power – and comes at the cost of Americans’ hard-earned health care.”
