MADISON, Wis. — Yesterday, California bank owner Eric Hovde doubled down on his position that people in nursing homes shouldn't be allowed to vote.

Last week, it was revealed that Hovde believes people in nursing homes shouldn't be allowed to vote because he believ es

they are “
not at the point to vote

.” He received

criticism from everyone including Wisconsin seniors and caregivers

to Kareem Abdul-Jabbar

for his comments.

Then yesterday, in an interview with Meg Ellefson, Hovde restated his position, saying “a large percentage of those people [in nursing homes] are not in the mental capacity to do that.”

***Listen to Hovde say yet again he believes people in nursing homes should not vote here.***
