

Former Middleton School Board President says "The truth is we fired him, but an independent arbitrator gave him his job back because of a legal loophole. Instead of running false, nasty attack ads, Scott Walker should focus on his own record."

MADISON – On Friday, Tony Evers' campaign released a new ad responding to Scott Walker's false, disgusting attacks regarding license revocation.

The ad features Ellen Lindgren, the former Middleton School Board President who was involved in the teacher case at the center of several Walker campaign and special interest group ads.

Evers' ad can be viewed here , the video and a full transcript is below.

"Ellen" Transcript:

Have you seen these false attack ads? They're not true.

I know—I was the school board president that oversaw that teacher.

The truth is: we fired him, but an independent arbitrator gave him his job back because of a legal loophole.

Two courts upheld that decision. That's why Tony Evers worked with both parties to change the law.

So instead of running false, nasty attack ads, Scott Walker should focus on his own record.

That's the fact.
