

The impact of the 2016 election on the redistricting lawsuit that could overturn our gerrymandered Wisconsin legislative map, the scary list of potential Trump cabinet appointments, and our Radio-Active campaign.

STATEWIDE - We discuss the possible impact of the 2016 election on the redistricting lawsuit that could overturn our gerrymandered Wisconsin legislative map. We focus our election attention forward to next spring’s state superintendent election between incumbent Tony Evers and John Humphries, who has the support of private school voucher interests.

Jorna educates us on the scary list of potential Trump cabinet appointments and has the latest Paul Ryan news. Robert discusses the impending attempt to throw 21 million people off health coverage and what we can do to stop it.

We also celebrate the success of our Radio-Active campaign to break the right-wing radio monopoly, and the doubling of the size of the Citizen Action Organizing Cooperative.
