

One Reason Why Walker Economics Does Not Work for Wisconsin

Posted on May 01, Posted by Bob Kiefert, Green Bay Progressive Category Our View

GREEN BAY - I sometimes wonder about some of my neighbors.

I see that down by the corner one of them has erected a "I Stand With Walker" sign. I guess they think they are making some sort of last stand, like the Texans at the Alamo.

Maybe they think Walker's Republican agenda is better for business and they like to fantasize that they are the "rich people" who will benefit from it. By New York standards of course, there are maybe ten real "rich" people in the whole state. Come on, they would never even let you join their country club, if you could come up with the money, much less let your son date their daughter.

Just as President George W. Bush and his cronies led a raid on the National Treasury, Scott Walker has a plan to rob from the people here in Wisconsin and give to the out of state rich in multi-national corporations. Wisconsin is "Open for Business", Walker says. Well, at least our wallets. Why do you think they are giving him all that money?

Here is why Walker's economic plan cannot work. You can't cut the salaries of thousands of public employees who work for the State's largest employer and lay off thousands more and not take a huge hit on the local economy. I don't know why people can't seem to understand this. It's basic economics and the real reason why Walker has turned Wisconsin into the country's biggest job loser.

But then, I have yet to understand why some people seem to hate the government for trying to help them get a fair deal on health insurance.

Sometimes I wonder about my neighbors.

Tags: Untagged