"I'm running because your voice matters and if elected I'll carry that voice to the State Capitol," said Peterson in Appleton Thursday.

APPLETON, WI – Today, former journalist, Kelly Peterson, launched her campaign for State Senate in the newly drawn 2nd District, which includes portions of Outagamie, Shawano, Oconto and Menominee Counties.

"Madison isn't working for the vast majority of working Wisconsinites," said Kelly Peterson. "Families are searching for affordable, accessible childcare. Family farmers are continuing to be squeezed out of business. And time and time again, women are demanding that their representatives protect their fundamental right to bodily autonomy. But Madison, including Eric Wimberger, remains indignant to these problems, oftentimes acting in direct defiance. I'm running because your voice matters and if elected I'll carry that voice to the State Capitol and deliver for hard working families across the 2nd District and Wisconsin."

Before being elected to office, Kelly was an award-winning journalist, winning four Emmys for her work producing documentaries on education, healthcare and human trafficking. Currently she's a college educator and resides in De Pere with her husband, Chris, a 20 year air force veteran and stepson, Ryan.
