Governor highlights initiatives to improve access to Clean Water, address PFAS and Lead Contaminants, and invest in Producer-Led Watershed Protection Efforts.

MADISON — Gov. Tony Evers will today continue his statewide tour celebrating Earth Week by visiting farms to highlight initiatives in his 2023-25 biennial budget to improve access to safe, clean drinking water by addressing contaminants like PFAS, nitrates, and lead and investing in producer-led watershed protection efforts.

“Whether for household use or crops and livestock, access to clean water is an issue that affects all Wisconsinites, regardless of ZIP code, and ensuring that we are doing all we can to make sure folks, families, and industries across our state have access to clean, safe water should not be a question of if we can get this work done, but when,” said Gov. Evers. “Our farmers have been leaders in this work for generations, and investing in their long-term success and the health of our water systems is the very minimum of what we owe them as a state.”
