Estimated 1.3 million childhood arrivals safe for now, Roberts casts deciding vote.

WASHINGTON, DC - The Supreme Court ruled on Thursday to block the Trump administration from ending an Obama-era program that shields nearly 700,000 young undocumented immigrants from deportation, upending a key feature of President Trump's immigration agenda.

In a fractured decision, the justices said the administration failed to give an adequate justification for terminating the Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals (DACA) program, as required by federal law.
