

MADISON - I'm still exhausted from the elections here in Wisconsin, but I've tried to make some sense of them, especially in the context of the ludicrous campaign spending and the outrageous racism of the ads against Mandela Barnes.

Here's the text of a talk I gave last night to the League of Women Voters of Wisconsin, where I address those issues, along with gerrymandering and the broader battle for democracy, justice, and freedom ahead:

Campaign Finance Reform and the Work Ahead for Justice

I hope this resonates with you, and I hope you find time to relax and rejuvenate this weekend.

Best,
