WASHINGTON, DC - Sen. Cory Booker (D-N.J.) announced on Monday that he would suspend his presidential campaign, acknowledging that he no longer saw a path to the Democratic nomination.

"I will carry this fight forward -- I just won't be doing it as a candidate for president this year," Booker said in an email to supporters.

"It's with a full heart that I share this news -- I've made the decision to suspend my campaign for president."
